ABSTRACT

This publication provides a comprehensive listing of all approved New Jersey programs for the preparation of public school personnel, including teachers, administrators, and educational service staff. In addition, the publication provides the basis for the "Interstate Agreement on Qualifications of Educational Personnel" in the states which are signatory to the Interstate Reciprocity Compact. Two types of teacher preparation programs are available in New jersey both of which are subject to onsite evaluation. Each provides the training and clinical experiences necessary to be qualified to receive an instructional certificate. They are: (1) approved traditional collegiate preparation programs, based in colleges and universities; and (2) approved provisional teacher programs, based in local school districts. A listing of requirements for all candidates for instructional certificates is provided. Summary data and data for each institution's program are provided in tabular form. (JD)

INTRODUCTION

It is my pleasure to transmit to you this publication, "State Approved Teacher Education Programs in New Jersey." The publication provides a comprehensive listing of all approved New Jersey programs for the preparation of public school personnel, including teachers, administrators and educational services staff. Additionally, this publication provides the basis for the "Interstate Agreement on Qualifications of Educational Personnel" in the states which are signatory to the Interstate Reciprocity Compact. The purpose of the compact is to maximize interstate mobility of persons who complete approved, teacher preparation programs.

Two types of teacher preparation programs are available in New Jersey both of which are subject to onsite evaluation. Each provides the training and clinical experiences necessary to be qualified to receive an instructional certificate.

They are:

- Approved traditional collegiate preparation programs, based in colleges and universities; and

- Approved provisional teacher programs, based in local school districts.

Irrespective of the type of program through which candidates choose to receive their training, all candidates for instructional certificates must:

- Have completed a baccalaureate degree from an accredited college or university;

- Have completed a major, or a concentration of 30 semester credit hours of instruction, in an arts and sciences discipline (persons seeking to be certified in specialized fields such as special education, business education, vocational education, health and physical education or home economics must major in the corresponding specialized, or technical field);

- Attain a passing score on the NTE test which is most closely aligned to the teaching field, or in the case of elementary and nursery candidates in the NTE Test of General Knowledge;

- Complete a Professional Training Sequence which will assure that the candidate has attained sufficient knowledge and skill in essential areas outlined by state regulation to become an effective beginning teacher; and

- Complete a successful year under provisional certification which includes regular support and supervision as well as periodic evaluation by school-based professionals. (This requirement has been in effect for candidates trained within the Provisional Teacher Training Program since 1985 and will be required of those trained within "traditional" college and university based, approved programs beginning September 1991).

I am pleased to provide this publication for your use.
